Project Summary

The Bondeau mangroves are part of a complex ecological system, typical for watersheds throughout Haiti, where impacts of changing climate have already been felt for decades. This project aims to protect mangrove ecosystems through concrete support to improve fishing and agricultural livelihoods, local capacity building, and a dynamic environmental stewardship campaign.

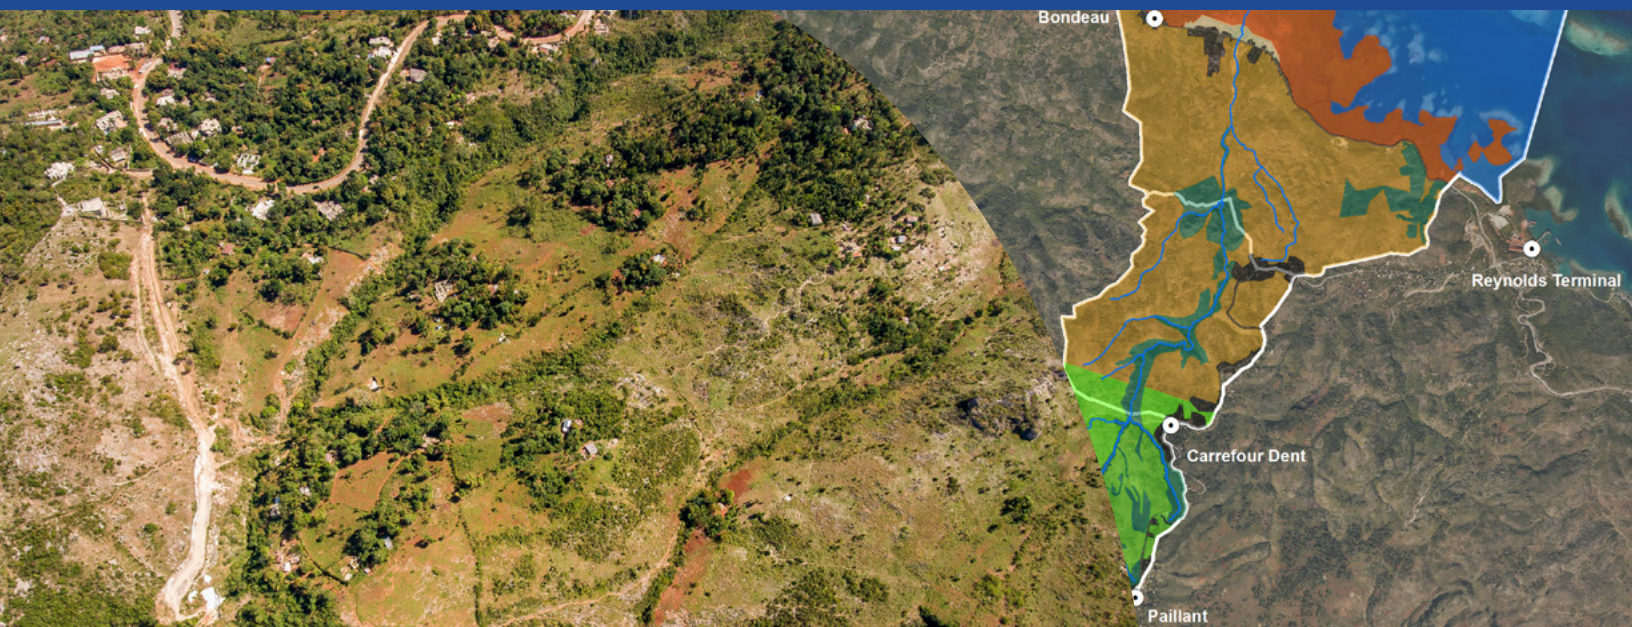

Two approaches are being pursued in parallel:

01. Strengthening agriculture and fishing livelihoods will be implemented from R2R. The mountain ecosystems will be reinforced through a Payment for Ecosystem Services (PES) program, focused on reforestation of the most vulnerable lands along ravines. Farmers will receive moringa seedlings and technical support to create a living greenbelt along the main ravine. This will have the dual impact of reducing sedimentation of the mangroves below while supplementing income for farmers;
02. Awareness-raising and movement building will transform community members and leaders into environmental stewards, focused on the protection and sustainable management of natural resources.
